Checklist for owners and trainers for selling or loaning a retired racehorse to the sport horse market

Based on the experiences of owners and trainers, RoR and NTF have put together the following recommendations for passing on a horse to the sport horse or hacking market to help ensure the horse has a well cared for life after racing.

- Only give or sell a horse to a responsible person. If they are not known to you, ask for a written reference from a vet, riding instructor or someone else you trust. Former racehorses do have a value.
- Register a non-racing form with Weatherbys. Registration is free.
- Check that the new owner has public liability insurance, which will minimise the likelihood of any claim for liability reverting to the original owner or trainer.
- Ask if veterinary insurance cover will be in place for the horse. If not suggest this is done. This should minimise the possibility of any comeback to the original owner or trainer if a problem occurs in retraining.
- Ask the new owner to read all the information on retraining and horse care available on the RoR website ror.org.uk. RoR also has a free 'Ask The Experts' helpline for any problems encountered by the new owner.
- Advise the new owner to register the horse with RoR to ensure they have access to any educational events in their area, as well as being aware of all the sport horse series of competitions where former racehorses can win prizes.
- Ask the new owner to give you feedback on their progress with their new horse. After three months, visit (or ask someone else to visit) to check the horse's health and welfare. Alternatively ask for a photograph to be sent to you.
- In the horse's passport put a note of the dates the horse was last wormed and had its teeth checked, and any other information that will help the new owner.
